LEE AND JACKSON.
Maj. Gen. Sir Garnet J. Wolseley, the victorious commander in the Ashantee war of 1873-'74, was stationed in Canada during our civil war, then joined Col. Wolseley, and made an underground visit to Gen. Lee just after the battle of Gettysburg. In the United States Magazine there is being published monthly a biographical sketch of Sir Garnet Wolseley, written by Lieut. Low, late of the Indian Navy, who is the author of "The Life of Sir George Pollock." In the last number of the Magazine the biographer reaches the portion in this hero's life when he was in Canada and made his visit to Lee. The reader is enabled to obtain from this narrative some account of Wolseley's opinions of the leading soldiers who fought on both sides in our war, and the value of their military operations.

O. Gen. R. E. Lee—the reader is informed by Lieut. Low—Sir Garnet Wolseley had the most exalted idea. These are his words: "It is Wolseley's deliberate opinion that in military genius Lee has no superior since the great Napoleon astonished the world by his marvelous career of victory; and he places Robert Lee even above the great German Generals who have so recently avenged the defeats inflicted on their country by the mighty Corsican." It was his great admiration for Lee, as well as his desire to study war under the novel aspects presented in the South that, induced Col. Wolseley to undertake the rather perilous journey to that country.

Leaving his quarters at Montreal quietly he passed through New York and Baltimore to the lower counties of Maryland where the northern terminus of the underground passage to the Confederacy was secretly laid. He had obtained in Canada and Baltimore confidential letters to persons in Maryland, who were in possession of the necessary facilities to put him on the right track. He struggled through the usual dangers which at that time attended the surreptitious crossing of the military lines, dodging from house to house and hiding in out-of-the-way places, and narrowly escaping one evening capture by Federal cavalry. But finally he got across the Potomac in safety, and wended his way partially on foot to Richmond.

He picked up at the river a countryman of his own bound on the same adventure, and during his subsequent stay in the Confederacy they stuck together. This companion of his subsequent travels was the Hon. Frank Lawley, brother of Lord Wellesley. Mr. Lawley was going to the Confederacy with a commission from The London Times to act as its correspondent. When the two Englishmen reached Richmond they were received with open arms by the people there. They had many social attentions, and the Confederate Government, through its Secretary of War, Mr. Randolph, gave them carte blanche to go wherever they pleased. After inspecting the fortifications at Richmond and Petersburg, they started by the Virginia Central Railroad to visit the headquarters of Gen. Lee which were then about six miles from Winchester.

Colonel Wolseley and his companion were received by General Lee with that kindness and stately courtesy for which he was so noted. Wolseley speaks with the utmost enthusiasm of the Southern commander. He described him as a person who, wherever seen, whether in a castle or hotel, alone or in a crowd, would at once attract attention as a splendid specimen of an English gentleman, with one of the most rarely handsome faces ever seen. The general was living in a tent like the rest of the men, though there was a comfortable farmhouse near by. But he so scrupulously respected the rights of private property that he would not consent to take possession of it.

He led the two Englishmen to a seat hard by, under a large tree, and there conversed with them on the topic most interesting to them, the past, present and future of the war. Wolseley says that, notwithstanding the personal losses at Arlington and elsewhere, which were very severe, Gen. Lee never evinced any bitterness of feeling against the North, nor gave utterances to a single violent expression. On the contrary, he alluded to many former friends and companions on the other side in the kindest terms. He talked freely about the battle of Antietam, which had just previous to been fought.

The celebrated Stonewall Jackson received Wolseley and The Times' correspondent with much affability. "He talked most affectionately of England, and of his brief but enjoyable sojourn there," Wolseley was quite overcome by this interview with Jackson. "For myself," he afterward exclaimed, impulsively, "I believe that, inspired by the presence of such a man, I should be perfectly insensible to fatigue, and reckon on success as a moral certainty." Wolseley also made some remarks on the merits of the Southern soldiers. He met, while visiting the front, batches of convalescent soldiers marching to join the army.

This led him to praise the spirit of the men, but to condemn the great want of judgment, evinced by the medical officers. After a sojourn of several days in the neighborhood of the Shenandoah Valley, Wolseley and Lowley retraced their steps to Richmond, and from thence the future conqueror of the Ashantees made his way by the tortuous and dangerous passage across the Potomac and through Maryland to Baltimore, and so back to Canada.

SIMMONS' TAKE LIVER REGULATOR

The Symptoms of Liver Complaint are unsteady and pain in the side. Sometimes the pain is in the shoulder, and is mistaken for rheumatism. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, bowels in general constive, sometimes alternating with lax. The head is troubled with pain, and dull, heavy sensation, considerable loss of memory, accompanied with painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. Often complaining of weakness, debility, and low spirits. Sometimes many of the above symptoms attend the disease, and at other times very few of them; but the Liver is generally the organ most involved.

DOLLAR CORSET
IN THE CITY.

Dress Makers recommend it as being the best Corset to fit a dress over, because it is cut in such a manner that the front and back seams fit like seams to a dress.
And it is superior to any other Corset now in use, because its peculiar style of cutting gives sufficient fulness at the bosom, without folding at the top; gradually and closely fitting to, and over the hips, is longer front and back than ordinary Corsets, and in fact is the only Corset cut in this form.
In addition to the DOLLAR CORSET will be found a large assortment of other makes at the following prices—$1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.50, $3.50 and $5.
